The Civil War in America. NEW YORK, MARCH The spring campaign has fairly opened, both is Virginia and Tennessee: and during the next six months the world may expect to hear of a succession of battles as bloody and as indecisive as Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville Gettysburg, or any other of the useless massacres of the war. The field of contest has been largely extended, and there are indications that not only Virginia, Tonnessee, Louisiana, Texas, Florida, and the Atlantic, States, but the rieli and hitherto undevastated regions of Pennsylvania and Ohio will be made to feel the full horrors of the sword andtorch, the rush of squadrons and the tramp o exasperated armies. Both sides have put forward their utmost available strength of men, if not of leaders. In leadership the South excels. It not only possesses the best Generals, but employs them without regard to politics or party favour, while the North with fewer men of note and ability to choose from, selects its Generals for non-military reasons, and dismisses them as soon as they display the slightest symptoms of genius. The South is grimly in earnest-as it has ever been; while the North, untaught by repeated reverses and disappointments, is jauntily confident of speedy victory, as if none of the rosente predictions of its political chieftains had ever been made and falsified. But although the area of the war widens with the march of time, neither eide has such large armies in the field as it had in : 1863. . Meade commands a smaller host than that with which he conquered at Gettyshurg, and Lee a force less by a third than that with which he invaded Pennsylvania. Grant's army does not exceed 60,000 men, while the combined forces a the Southern Generals, who are about to try if has produced. Pending the outburst of the storm which wil speedily roar and flash on every side, unless all the warnings of the barometer and all the signs on the horizon be deceptive. it may be well for the student of American affairs to take as accurate and comprehensive a survey as his vision will against all the principles which the ancestors of RANITE Built GODOWNS, having allow of the social and political condition of the Northern people and their rulers at a crisis of their fortunes which the issue of one battle or other circumstances may render decisive. To ascertain what the President is doing, what objects of individual or national concern occupy the attention of his Cabinet, with what spirit the Senate and the House of Representatives are imbued, what are the sepirations and character of the soldiery. what are the honesty and patriotism or the reverse of the military chieftains, and what is the morality or immorality, the power or the weakness, of parties-all these are inquires of the highest interest. There can be no doubt that there are many true patrious in America, men of noble ideas and lofty aims, but at this turning point in the history of their country it is of importance to know whether they are in the majority or the minority, and whether it be in their power to direct to happy issues, either now or hereafter, the apparently all but desperate fortunes of their

realm, we find that Mr. Lincoln is confessedly incompetent to restore neace or prosecute a succesful war; Even his honesty- for which at one time all the world was willing to give him creditappears to have succumbed to the evil influences which surround him. Three years possession of power has familiarized him with baseness. He meets serious argument with a jest, and buys the too troublesome opponent whom he cannot otherwise silence. Fascinated, as greater men bave heen, by the exercise of supreme nutbority, ha cannot reconcile his mind to the decency of relinguishing it. He has learnt to play with principles as gamblers play with dice, and, desiring to be re-nominated to the Presidency, he is determined to win the game unfairly if he cannot anarchy and convulsion. win it otherwise. The Constitution which he swore to uphold having been abrogated on the plea of military necessity by a subservient majority ln both Houses of the Legislature, he acts in all to attain power, is perhaps more melancholy than aspects as he pleases. He absolves himself from obedience to all authority but his own. He plans campaigns though he is no soldier, and sets aside the combinations of his Generals without giving himself the trouble to understand them. He orders an army to advance for a political purpose, even though the result of the movement should be a military disgrace, and is so fearful that some successful General should appear and end the war by such a victory as would make the victor President, that he cripples the energies of his best officers, and withholds alike his confidence and his reinforcements. Within the the sword, and are as mercilessly intolerant as last month, without consultation with his Secre- the successors of Mahomed in Asia. or the Intary of War or Commander-in-Uhief, he directed | quisition in Spain. The plunder rather than the an expedition into Florida, making his private secretary, a lad of 20 years of of age, the bearer of orders to General Gilmore to take military possession of that State. The object was tobacco, and were unable to cultivate them by not a military one, but solely intended to organize | the free labour either of white men or of blacks, a civil government in the name of a minority, by they would do on a large scale what General means of which Florida might be represented in Banks has done on a small one, and re-esta-Congress and cast its vote for Mr. Lincoln, if the blish slavery—as they have abolished the Presidential election should fall, as most people Constitution—on the plea of military necesbelieve it will, to the decision of the House of sity. Nor are their great opponents, Representatives. The result of this stupendous Democrats, very much better. They clamour for exercise of arbitrary folly has been a disastrous failure. The five thousand men despatched under General Seymour to accomplish the President's purpose were suddenly confronted by an enemy of thrice their numbers, of whose existence neither Mr. Lincoln nor the General employed had the alightest suspicion, and forced to retreat with a loss of 1,200 men in killed and wounded. Besides the human lives thus wantonly sacrificed. this illetarred expedition cost about two millions of dollars in money. This is but one, though as yet the last, specimen of Mr. Lincoln's management, at a time when not alone the greatest prudence and circumspection are necessary preyent mishap, but when the purest self-sacrifice and the most patriotic devotion in the chief of the State, and of all others in high position, are essential to prevent the worse calamities that may follow upon dishonour.

The spectacle offered by the Cabinet is scarcel more edifying. In any other constitutional country men in the position of Mr. Stanton and General Halleck would have resigned their offices if a man may result at which the world will be astonished. in the position of the President had planned and commanded such an expedition as that to Florida without consultation with and concurrence from them, but as they have purdoses of their own to serve, they hold on to their partialies, and wash their hands of responsibility. A striking peculiarity of Mr. Lincoln's Cabinet is that the Cabinet never meets. Each Secretary manages his own department, as far as the President will allow, and takes no heed of the national policy as whole. In American phrase, each man "runs his "own machine," and has little, if any, other bject than to make such political capital out of its management as will place him in a favourable position before the country in the scramble for office. It is known that there is not a single member of the Cabinet who does not think he would make a better President than Mr. Lincoln; and the great majority of them do not acruple to say so. Mr. Seward missed the Presidency by a mere chance, and was only made Secretary of State because he was too powerful to be emitted from the combinations of the party and even he -superior as be must feel himself to be in intellect and acquirements to the master whom he serves-is content to " run" the foreign machine, while he sees, without any effort to avert it. the domestic machine running headlong down a precipice where it must inevitably be dashed to pieces. The Secretary of the Tressury, the coelest, and, as far is known, the honestest head in the Government, is openly a candidate for Mr. Lincoln's seat, and if no unfair or extra-constitutions means are employed to thwart him, will in all probability secure a larger popular vote than any competitor of the came political bias. Mr. Stanton also has Presidential aspirations, and works to and Gage Streets and of two bundred and twenty to that end, though he may think that another ! period of four years may intervene before his critical area of about 19000 square feet. wishes be gratified. The other Secretaries, though they respect each other but little, respect Mr. Lincoln still less, and have searcely a bund sympathy to unite them to his political fortupes stronger then that which urges them to look jealonsly upon the rising fame of any soldier who threatens to sieze upon dictatorial power, and so consign the whole of them to exile or to obscurity. | der Room, and Accommodation for storse Boys The Legislature does not show to greater advantage than the Cabinet. The Senate estracizes the Office of patriots like Mr. Bayard because they advocate peace, and applauds Mr. Summer and Mr. Wilson for insisting on the right of negroes to ride in THE House on Marine Lot No. 40, Spring railway carriages with white men; though they have not uttered a syllable against General Banks | States Naval Depot. for the virtuales establishment of slavery throughout every part of Louisiana where his authority extends. The espirations and character of the soldiery may be more briefly stated. The war has already converted them into a class apart. They know that for many years, whatever may be the issues of the strife, the Northern States must maintain a standing army of half a million of men. They have acquired, to a large extent, the esprit de corps, and, under able guidance, they expect to make themselves the masters of the country. That " the bayonets think" is the foolish beast of men who should know better than to imagine that such & circumstance is other than a frightful peril to the State that employs them. The bayonets may hereafter come to think that the destruction of the commonwealth and the rection of a military despotism on its ruins is desirable; and if they ex think, who is to prevent them from carrying their General Banks is a diotabe an advantage to both parties, and much of the tor, wherever his power extends-and that his illsuccess which has attended the efforts of the power is not slight, nor exercised with any ten-South to conquer independence, and of the North dor regard to the principles for which the Norto compel allegiance, may be due to the fact that thern people are supposed to be waging this terthe armies of each have been too large for the rible war, is apparent from the ease and impunity effective management of any General which either with which he has seized hold of the freed slaves of the Scuthern planters, and compelled them to labour for hours which he prescribes and for reward which he fixes.

General Butler, as high-handed a despot as Providence ever permitted to afflict a community, present occupied by Mesers. PARKER & Co. has gone beyond General Banks in his outrage | tf Hongkong 16th April, 1864. the Americans are supposed to have revered long I frontage, at Wanchai. before the first Anglo-Saxon set his foot upon American soil, and in support of which the passengers by the Mayflower were contented to dwell i and savage beasts. General Banks, whatever may be said against the system of serfage which he has found himself forced to establish, may urge in extenuation that he could not as a wise ruler allow rich lands to remain uncultivated, while there were hundreds of thousands of men strong enough to work upon them, but who would not or could not work without compulsion or guidance; but General Butler, in taking the pulpit under his management-or, as Mr. Lincoln phrases it, "in running the " oburches," has usurped a power that at any time these two hundred years would have cost a King of England his throne, if not his head, if he had dared to exercise, or even to claim it. Cenerals Burneide, Schenck, Milroy, Hascall, and a whole host of subordinate provost-marshals, have made Europe and Amerialring with the story of their willingness to grush out the liberties of their countrymen, and of their attempts to rival the worst atrocities of the worst tyrants whom the world ever saw. There is no lack of such, material in the Foderal Army. In this respect it may be urged on behalf of the Americani that in a time of civil war, when the military becomes the supreme power, it cannot be otherwise; that an army is a ruthless machine, and that unreasoning obedience to anthority is the essence of the discipline without which no zrmy can exist. But these are circums-

The present condition of the two great parties, all the other aspects of the hour. . The Republicans ignore and deny the principle on which the Union was founded, and are revolutionizing the whole-system of government, substituting force for consent, centralization for diffusion, despotism for liberty. They are not alone arbitrary, but l corrupt. They destroy liberty for the sake of territory, and would treat their brethren of the South as the Norman invaders under William the Conqueror treated the Saxon English. They force their political, religious, and philanthrepic doctrines down the throats of recalcitrants with conquest of the South is the object at which war while they mean peace. They are hopelessly. corrupt and demoralized by the long possession of power' which they abused by the means that their system compelled them to adopt to maintain themselves in possession of place and its perquisites. In short, the real intelligence, virtue, and public spirit of the country are not represented by either of the parties that exist. Honest men keep aloof from politics lest they should be contaminated. and the public peril has not yet impressed itself with sufficient vividness before the eyes of the majority to force them to arise, as the people have been accustemed to do in other countries at great national crises, and sweep away the old parties indignantly by the creation of a new, without other objects to serve than those of the public safety, or other motives tham those of the national honour. It is under circumstances like these that the fourth campaign of the war has opened. Should successes reward the perseverance of the North, there will not be very much difference in the

C. COLLIN-Acting Sexton. tf Hongkong, 5th November, 1863

THE Works of the Hongkong and China Gas Co., being fast approaching completion, the Directors are desirous on this the first introduction of Gas into the Colony to draw the attention of the inhabitants to the advantages to be derived by its use over all other methods of lighting, not only with respect to brilliancy, cleanliness, and safety-but from economy and permanency. The following are a few of the inducements for the adoption of Gas, when compared with Oil or Candles as ascertained in every part of the Globe where works have been established :-1st .- It is sufer than Oil or Candles as there are no Wicks or Sparks.

and .- No injury to Carpets or Furniture by the dropping of oil. ird .- No Waste by Carelessness or dishonest 4th,-It is lighted, increased, diminished o extinguished in a moments time.

5th. The light from a Gas Burner consuming 5 ft. of Gas per hour is equal to 12 Candles, and will illuminate a room to the same extent. Houses can be either partially of wholly lighted at once, and can have extralights affixed at any future time. The yearly cost being in exact proportion to the number of burners required.
